A CORNER IN ANCESTORS

By FRANCES COWLES.

THE OSBORN FAMILY.

From Peter Osborn, of Parlieth, Essex County, England Come Many New England Osborns. Other Families of the Name. Something of the Tinctures of Heraldry.

The English Osborns, with whom our own Connecticut Osborns are probably connected, have a proud pedigree. Peter Osborn, of Parlieth, Essex, who lived in the middle of the fifteenth century, had a son and heir named Richard, who married a daughter of the Cawson family. They had two sons, John, who left a daughter, and Richard, who located at Tyld Hall, Essex, and died in 1544, leaving two sons, John and Peter.

Peter, who was born in 1521, was a man of great understanding and is said to have been very zealous for the reformed religion. He held office in the exchequer and was keeper of the privy purse to King Edward VI. He was a close friend of Sir John Cheke, the noted English scholar who was tutor to King Edward VI and the Princess Elizabeth.

He had John, Hannah, Percilla, Sara, Mary, Elizabeth and David. Of his sons, John was the founder of the New Haven branch of the family and David the founder of the Ridgefield branch.

Many descendants of these Osborns are now to be found in New York, Ohio, and other States of the Union.

Another Osborn family traces its origin in this country to Samuel Osborn, who was born in Ireland of Scotch parents and graduated at the Dublin University. Little is known of him, save that he was considered a fine scholar and that he came to this country, where he lived at Sandwich, Mass. He had a son John, born in Sandwich in 1735, who was graduated from Harvard College in 1755.

LADY DECIES, who was Vivien Gould, and her eldest daughter. Lord and Lady Decies' infant son, the Marquis of Beresford, was christened in London last week.

The arms of the Osborns are blazoned: Argent a bend between two lions rampant sable. The crest is a lion's head proper, ducally crowned. The motto is: "Quantum in rebus inane."

This is the armorial bearing of the Osborns of Chicksand Priory, Sheffield, England, and of course, unless it can be proved by the American branch of Connecticut Osborns that the Richard who came to this country in 1634 in the ship Hopewell was the Richard, son of Thomas, son of Sir John Osborn, knight, there is no very good reason why the Connecticut Osborns should bear these arms. However, the evidence seems to be all in favor of such relationship.

ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS.

To a member of the Flournoy family who wishes to know the origin of that family in America, and also asks for a description of the coat-of-arms and crest.

Every Flournoy in America is descended from Laurent Flournoy, who came with Gabrielle Mellin. Laurent fled from the Champagne, France, to Geneva, Switzerland, after the Duke of Guise massacred the Protestants in 1562, thus the Flournoys were early sufferers for their religion.

His wife Gabrielle was born in Lyons. They had two sons, Jean, born 1574, and Gideon, Jean married Frances Mussard, and they had Jacques, born 1608. He married Judith Puerari, or Pucary. Their son Jacques, born 1657, married Julia Eyraud.

It is interesting to note that "Julia" is a name, which joined to "Elizabeth" has been perpetuated to the present day. In every generation there is an Elizabeth Julia.

Laurent was a lapidary, and his sons followed the same trade. The son of Jacques and Julia was Jean Jacques, born November 17, 1686. He is one of the progenitors of the American branch of Flournoys. Jean Jacques married in Virginia June 23, 1720, Elizabeth, daughter of James Williams and his wife, Elizabeth Buckner, and widow of Orlando Jones.

Jean Jacques, immigrant, and Elizabeth had ten children—sons and daughters. The sixth son and youngest child was Col. Thomas, an ancestor to anchor by. He is a wise descendant who claims himself to be a "Col. Thomas" held office in various kinds. He was born November 20, 1720.

The name Flournoy is not common, either in this country or in Europe, but those who can claim Flournoy lineage, if not the name, are found probably in every State in the Union. From Virginia the family went farther south, to Kentucky and Tennessee, and now every State, without doubt, has its branch of the family, which traces back to Jacques or to his uncle Jacob.

In Europe, there are some of the name in Switzerland, and in America, a number of the family was compiled by Galle, entitled "Some genealogical accounts of Geneva families from earliest times to the present day." A family history was also begun by Gideon, brother of Jean Jacques.

From the Galle book we learn that Flournois, or Flournoy was a village of thirty households, between Joinville and St. Didier, France. Altancourt, Champagne, was Laurent's home; his house and lands were sold after his flight to Switzerland. He also had lands at Vassy and in three or four other jurisdictions, and he also owned land in the town of Flournoy, also spelled Flornoy, Flornoy, Flornoy and Flornowa. A member of the Flournoy family at Geneva has a map and views of this old town, where one member of the family is now living, an old lady, who was born Flournoy.

The interesting part of the Flournoy story, or one of the points to mention, is the derivation of the name. It is French and from the words "four" and "noir," and the coat-of-arms is a play on the name, punning arms, or "canting," to speak heraldically, therefore, granted in the early days of coat-arms.

"The flowers of the walnut" is the literal translation, and the name, first Flournois went through several changes before becoming Flournoy.

The arms are blazoned: Azure, a chevron argent, in chief, two chains of walnut flowers, in pale a walnut of the same (same color, argent).

Motto: Ex fructu fructus—"From the flower fruit."

To Curious One who asks: Will you please explain the terms gules, argent, or, etc., used in heraldic descriptions? Also, what is the meaning of the terms ermine? Is this the fur ermine?

Only two metals are used in heraldry, or (gold) and argent (silver). When the actual colors do not appear or is represented by dots at frequent and regular intervals; argent by a perfectly plain surface.

The colors, or tinctures in regular use, are five: Gules (red), azure (blue), sable (black), vert (green) and purpure (purple).

Gules—when the colors do not appear—is represented by perpendicular lines.

Azure, by horizontal lines. Sable, by horizontal and perpendicular lines, crossing each other.

Regarding the heraldic significance of metals and tinctures. Or denotes generosity and elevation of mind.

Argent, peace and sincerity. Gules, military fortitude and magnanimity.

Azure, loyalty and truth. Sable, constancy.

Vert, hope, joy and loyalty in love. Purpure, royal majesty, sovereignty and justice, called the most majestic of colors.

Of fur used in heraldry there were formerly but two, ermine and vair. The former is a well-known fur; the latter is a species of squirrel. Several modifications of ermine were subsequently introduced—they are ermine, ermineo, erminites and peau-a-l'artificial and peculiar to heraldry. Ermine is represented by black spots upon a white ground.

Vair is shown by shield, bell or cup-shaped figures. Ermine is represented with the field sable and the spots argent (black fur with white spots); erminites has sable spots upon a field or; erminites only differs from ermine in having a red hair upon each side of the black spot; peau, the reverse of erminites, is spots or upon a field sable.

In blazoning any armorial bearings—that is, describing them in words—the shield or escutcheon should first be fully described, then the crest, subsequently the supporters, if any, and lastly the motto. The wreath need never be mentioned, nor the helmet and mantling (which are not always present), for they must always follow the rules of heraldry, their colors being determined by the arms, as already said.

The background of the arms, or the field, as it is often called, may be either of metal, color or fur, as a rule singly, but frequently combined.

in Bedford County, where his descendants still retain their country seat. Sir John married Dorothy Barlee, and died in 1628 at the age of 78, leaving five sons and one daughter. These sons were Peter, Christopher, who died young, Richard, who has a son Richard (probably the Richard who sailed from England in the ship Hopewell and founded the Connecticut Osborn family; and two others.

Peter, the eldest son of Sir John and Dorothy Barlee, was for twenty-eight years governor of the island and castle of Guernsey, in the reigns of Charles I and James I. He married Dorothy Danvers. His son, Sir John, the first baronet, married Eleanor Danvers and he was succeeded by his eldest son John, whose descendants still live at Chick-sand, Dorset.

Now as for the American Richard, he came to these shores in 1634 at the age of twenty-two. He was a volunteer from Windsor, Conn., in Lieut. Ludlow's company in the "Pequot" war and took part in the Bloody Swamp fight, for his service in which he received eighty acres of land in the town of Ridgefield. He had John, Hannah, Percilla, Sara, Mary, Elizabeth and David. Of his sons, John was the founder of the New Haven branch of the family and David the founder of the Ridgefield branch.
